► FORGING NEW PATHS

Saint Elizabeth has a long history of promoting leadership, social responsibility and service to others. We're looking for motivated students with strong convictions and the desire to be in an environment with an unwavering system of values.

I love how family-like Saint Elizabeth is... without all the bonds I have with students, faculty, staff and professors, I do not think I would be getting the most out of my education.”

Katie B., '22
Biology/Education

Katie B. has filled her schedule with multiple opportunities for professional, educational and personal development. She tutors in the Academic Success Center, engages with prospective students as a Student Ambassador, is the Vice President of the Class of 2022 and works as a Lab Assistant for the biology department.

The beneficiary of the Elizabethan Scholarship and a recipient of the National Science Foundation grant, Katie has found great success at SEU because of her willingness to participate. As a member of the Elizabethan Education Association, Katie has formed invaluable connections and forged meaningful relationships with her professors.

In the process of earning a teacher of students with disabilities certification at SEU, Katie advances her educational knowledge every single day. “Studying at Saint Elizabeth University has given me an opportunity to intern at a local learning center,” explains Katie, who found this internship during SEU’s Eagles Fair. “Saint Elizabeth gives students so many opportunities for success!”

Syrus S., '23
Criminal Justice

Syrus S. has dedicated his life to being a positive role model for his two nephews. Constantly working to better himself, Syrus chose Saint Elizabeth University to pursue a degree in criminal justice.

“I hope my nephews not only emulate my volunteerism, levelheadedness and commitment to education,” says Syrus, “but also follow in my footsteps and break barriers in their own communities.”

As for Syrus, he prides himself on his ability to start critical conversations impacting the world today. He intends on entering the law enforcement field upon graduating from Saint Elizabeth University.

“A lot of the problems in this world can be solved with a conversation. It’s the first step in making anything better.”

► EXPLORING OPPORTUNITIES

We pride ourselves on providing quality, outcome-driven educational opportunities that guide and transform students into the men and women that help shape our world.

It should be no surprise that the University itself is also constantly evolving. With the introduction of undergraduate coeducation and the launch of a new brand, Saint Elizabeth University is committed to providing a globally-focused, relevant education for a fast-paced and ever-changing world.

Katherine R., '21 Social Work

Katherine R. believes that with the right amount of guidance and a solid education, it is possible to achieve any goal. Her main objective: to build a better life for her family, herself and her community.

Katherine and her family settled in a city wrought with violence and injustice upon immigrating to the United States. "Witnessing the violence that would happen in my community and how it impacted my home inspired me to study social work," says Katherine, a native of the Dominican Republic. "I developed a strong sense of justice and a need to protect those who couldn't protect themselves."

Katherine's passion to help those in need and give a voice to the silenced, was ignited at SEU. Through the University's social work department, Katherine was able to participate in Project Homeless Connect. Organized by the Mental Health Association of Essex and Morris, this event brought together more than 40 service providers who offered resources to those struggling with homelessness.

Upon graduating from SEU, Katherine hopes to continue her advocacy for those in need by working for the Department of Child Protection and Permanency. She credits SEU with the confidence and knowledge needed to pursue such a demanding job.

“The SEU Admissions Counselors saw me as a flower that just needed the correct support in order to blossom.”

Walnier P., '22 Computer Software Engineering

Growing up in the Dominican Republic, Walnier "Wally" Perez, learned from an early age that his mother prioritized education over anything else. She was always pushing him to take advantage of the opportunities life presented and to never settle for less than he deserved. This encouragement empowered Wally to move to the United States alone just before his senior year of high school to prepare for and apply to college.

As a first-generation college student, Wally encountered many challenges, especially his most formidable foe: math class. Not his favorite subject during high school, Wally knew he had to get through math for his computer software engineering major.

"I had a very bumpy start with math, but the faculty and staff made it abundantly clear that I didn't have to go it alone," recalls Wally. "I was flooded with love and support from each and every one of them."

At SEU, he took advantage of three important tools: the academic success center, counseling services and the community's unwavering support.

"The SEU community guides students, without holding their hands, offering correct support so anyone can flourish as long as they pour their heart into it," added Wally.

SEU PROMISE

Saint Elizabeth University has established SEU Promise (SEUP) to provide students with a career development program specifically designed to supplement formal classroom education. We believe that students who actively engage in fulfilling all program requirements are more likely to succeed in their professional or educational endeavors after college.

SEUP integrates classroom instruction, experiential education, servant leadership, and career-focused workshops. It is structured so that each year of the program builds on the previous one, helping students prepare for their next career step after graduation.

Our Promise states that if any student, who fully participates in our program for all four years of the SEU experience, does not receive a job offer or is not accepted into a graduate/professional school within six months of graduation, the University will find a paid six-month internship.

Visit seu.edu/seupromise for details.

The program begins in fall 2021 with the opening of the esports arena that will enable all students to gather in a supercharged gaming environment. The University also is offering a newly created Bachelor of Science in Computer Engineering with a concentration in Game Development and Design, and competition with its first varsity esports team in fall 2022.

"We're entering a new era and embracing different ways to promote student engagement, support inclusivity and help students succeed," said Katherine M. Buck, SEU's vice president for student life. "We are excited about the commitment we've made to esports and hope that our new program will attract students to our institution, engage all students across our campus and build a highly competitive team in the esports industry."

The University is currently working with students to determine what games to include and plans to hire a varsity coach. The newly constructed arena also includes space for students who enjoy watching and/or playing recreationally, with the idea of creating a campus "hub."
