Dear CSE Community,

I’m writing today to give you a brief update on the coronavirus monitoring and preparations on campus. You may have seen that a number of colleges and universities with spring breaks scheduled for next week announced moving classes online when break is over.

We are closely monitoring the ever-changing situation and will modify our operations if necessary moving forward. As of now, there are no presumptive or confirmed cases of COVID-19 at CSE and the College is taking precautionary measures to keep our community healthy.

However, a faculty member who recently returned from a trip abroad during spring break has self-imposed a 14-day quarantine. The faculty member has not been on campus or in contact with anyone from the CSE community since returning to the United States. The faculty member is being monitored by a primary care provider and will keep us informed of changes in health status.

CSE, like other colleges and universities across the world, is actively engaged in efforts to prepare for and mitigate the impacts from COVID-19. Our top priority is to support the health and wellbeing of our community as we continue to advance our mission. I encourage you to visit the CSE coronavirus website and watch your CSE email for updated information.

As a reminder, all members of the campus community should continue to follow best practices to avoid illness, including frequent hand washing and avoiding touching one’s face with unwashed hands. If you are not feeling well, do not attend classes or work. Stay home, get rest, and get any medical attention you need.

If you have any questions, please don’t hesitate to send them to csepresident@cse.edu.

Sincerely,

Helen J. Streubert President
